Mt. Fuji Climbing + Hiking

The Gotemba Mt. Fuji Climbers' Entrance Road

The Gotemba Mt. Fuji climbers' Entrance is the climbing entrance for Mt. Fuji that is most easily accessed. From Gotemba Station on the JR Gotemba Line, it is only a forty minute drive. Although the temperature differential between the lower reaches of the mountain and its peak is roughly twenty degrees centigrade, most climbers take this into account with proper preparation and aim for a total climbing time of between seven and eight hours to reach the highest point, Kengamine (although rest stops to aid them in their adjustment to the different air pressures may affect their time). When descending the mountain, there is a distance of seven kilometers between the Seventh Station and climbing entrance for Mt. Fuji. This area was thickly covered with volcanic ash during an eruption of Mt. Hoei in 1707. This area makes for much easier walking, as each step allows you to slide for a distance of roughly three meters.

Enjoy hiking in the old-growth forest of Mt. Fuji

Mt. Fuji is much more than the summit. Several fine hiking trails start from Gotemba trail New 5th Station near the base of the mountain.

Regional Specialties

The favorable conditions that compose the wonderful highland climate are maximally utilized in the production of a variety of regional specialties. First on the list would be the tea, fed by highland dews as it grows in flavor. Used in beverages and also in a wide variety of traditional Japanese sweets and desserts, tea attracts fans from across all the age groups. Spring water from the slopes of Mt. Fuji is also used for creating varieties of pickled vegetables, sweet-and-sour soy sauce as well as a spectrum of locally brewed liquors, all of which make popular gifts.

Ham, Sausage

American missionaries introduced ham and sausage making to Gotemba long ago, and the tradition is carried on by local specialty shops.

Beer, Whiskey, Soy sauce

There are many fine products made possible only by the underground water from Mt. Fuji.

Gotemba Koshihikari Lager

A premium lager, made from premium koshihikari rice grown with Mt. Fuji groundwater. Enjoy it straight from the tap at the Gotemba Kogen Beer micro-brewery.

Rice, Soba, Wasabi

The Gotemba climate of clear air, autumn chill, and foggy mountain ravines provides a flavorful agricultural bounty.

富士山樹空の森 Mt. Fuji Jukuu no Mori

Mt. Fuji Jukuu no Mori

Mt. Fuji Jukuu no Mori is one of the largest park in Japan based on the theme of Mt. Fuji.
In addition to the splendid view of Mt. Fuji that visitors can enjoy from inside the park, it is also completely surrounded by nature and has plenty of must-see attractions, such as the Sky Theater in the Visitor Center. This theater reproduces the structure and scenery of Mt. Fuji under each season through a giant screen of 270 inches and a 6-meter diameter model of the mountain for an astonishing view of Mt. Fuji from the sky.
Enjoy the nature in the four seasons in this large park offering a playground with slides including a roller slide and amusement facilities on Adventurer Hill, Fureai Field, which is a large green field; Forest Adventure Gotemba, which is Japan's largest athletic park; and a rose garden where you can enjoy about 1,500 roses in one location.

秩父宮記念公園
Prince Chichibu Memorial Park

Prince Chichibu Memorial Park

This park used to be the villa in which His Imperial Highness Prince Chichibu and Her Imperial Highness Princess Chichibu spent time during the war and in the postwar period. The exhibition room, in which the bequest articles of the Imperial family are displayed, and the About 300 years old main house in the park are of cultural heritage. The seasonal weeping cherry flowers are enjoyable to look at too.

駒門風穴
Komakado Caves

Komakado Caves ("Komakado Kazaana")

Divided into a main cave and an auxiliary, with lengths of 291 meters and 110 meters respectively, the caves have a total surface area of 7,542 square meters. Stalactites still hang from the caves' ceiling, and a giant lava flow forms the middle of the cave, preserving its ancient shape.

Niihashi Sengen Shrine

Niihashi Sengen Shrine ("Niihashi Sengen Jinja")

Said to have been built in 1193 by Minamoto-no-Yoritomo, the shrine later came to be associated with a deity of learning, Michizane Sugawara. Designated an intangible cultural asset, the shrine is renowned for its lion dance and children's dance. The latter dance is performed as part of a ceremony where people pray for the safety of Mt. Fuji climbers each year on July 1st when the mountain is opened for climbing.
